THURSDAY EVENING, AUG. 6, 1908

Among the geniuses none perhaps was stranger than the poet Baudelaire, who dyed his hair green, tried to strangle his father-in-law, used oplum, to bacco and wine to excess and enjoyed perverted olfactory sensations. oul soars upon perfumes as the souls of other men soar upon music," he wrote. But what pleased him, strangewere odors of putrefaction, vile smells which other men abhorred and the stenches of disease which made others sick. And yet his poetry is among the most passionately musical of the literature of France. He was exceedingly superstitious, being he would not succeed in an undertaking unless he left a house first with the left foot, and would count the numbe of gas jets along the streets, the numers of cabs and numbers of doors Adding these figures in his mind, he would consider the result an omennultiples of three good, multiples of seven reassuring, while his bad number was seventeen. Curiously, once he was thrown out of a cab, the figures of which he added and found amounted to seventeen.

A Sharp Swindler.

A fashionable young lady once drove up in a handsome carriage to a private lunatic asylum situated a few miles from Paris and requested to see the proprietor. Her wish being acceded to, she informed the doctor that she desired to place her husband under his care to see if a cruel mania under which he labored-viz, "that he had lost a large quantity of jewels"-could not be removed. After some hesitation the doctor consented, and the lady drove away directly to a jeweler's in Paris and selected jewels to the value of several thousand france and requested one of the shopmen to go with her in her carriage to procure the money for the goods she had taken. She drove with him to the asylum, and, arriving there, he was shown into a The lady then sought the doctor, told him of the arrival of her husband and, getting into her carriage, again drove away. The rest may be imagined, but the poor fellow was confined several days before it was found they both had been "sold." The lady was never heard of after.

Wagner's Portrait.

When Wagner was in England supervising the first production of his operas, the music enthusiasts commissioned the artist Herkomer to paint the musician's portrait, but Wagner was dashing about in such a state of frenzy that he repelled impatiently every attempt to get him to give a "sitting." Still, Herkomer stuck to him like a limpet, fed with him, walked and talked with him, watched him conduct his orchestra, write music and read books. At last, when every attempt to secure a "sitting" had failed, Herkomer rose early one morning, painted with fren-zied speed all day, spent a short night in restless sleep, rose early again and painted furiously, till on the second evening he sat down exhausted-but with his picture finished. Wagner was called in and threw up his hands in amazement. "Ah!" he cried. "Won-derful! That is exactly how I would like to look if I could."

Why Kelly Didn't Sleep.

"One night I went in late to Father Dempsey's hotel. Every bed was full, and there were 200 men sleeping on the floor of the recreation room. Each one of them had a newspaper under him to keep off the dust of the floor. I pointed to one little Irishman and remarked that he did not seem to be resting well.

"'What's your name, my man?' Fa ther Dempsey asked him.

Thomas Kelly, your reverence.

"'You don't seem to be resting well, Mr. Kelly.'

"'I'll get to sleep after awbile, your reverence,' he answered.

"'I don't believe you will unless you change your bed. You're sleeping on a Westliche Post,' answered Father Dempsey."-St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Caught the General.

One of the regular army officers tells a story of how the old stringent army regulations once went against General Scott. One wet afternoon that soldier was caught in the rain in Washington. He was in full uniform and was well known, so, no cab being near, he porrowed an umbrella. Arriving at his hotel, an underofficer approached him and calmly remarked:

"For twenty years I suffered from a bad case of granulated some eyes, [says "General, you will consider yourself under arrest for eight days for carrying an umbrella while in full uni-
